

Do you like to see Koalas when you are out walking?

You can help bring birds, butterflies and Koalas back to our mountain.

Our volunteer Bushcare groups are consolidating and linking wildlife habitat with restoration work in four strategic sites around the mountain.

You can join members of Mt Gravatt Environment Group for a relaxing morning or afternoon in the forest.

No experience necessary, all equipment is provided and the company is interesting – you might be working beside a university student from Shanghai, a retired jockey or a property investment analyst.

Corporate groups are also welcome. Ask FWR Group about their team building experience. www.fwrgroup.com.au

Business Goes Bush in Mt Gravatt

"It was a great afternoon!"

Mike Duggan, Managing Director of FWR Group, was commenting on his team's afternoon restoring bushland at Mount Gravatt.

FWR Group, a local sustainability consultancy, is a long-term supporter of Fox Gully Bushcare, so it was a pleasure to welcome the whole team to the regular Wednesday afternoon bushcare. Mike, Tessa, Luke, Virginia, Amelia and Michael joined locals Michael, Roger and Cindy to strip invasive fishbone fern from the gully.

With the weed removed, indigenous ferns basket fern, rasp fern, rough maidenhair and gristle fern will re-establish restoring the natural beauty and vital wildlife habitat.

The power of the hands-on contact with our bushland, discovering a beautiful mushroom or an unusual beetle, showed in laughter and chatter.

Being part of this happy energetic group was an amazing experience. Of course, Margaret's homemade scones with cream and bush-lucker Davisonia plum jam for afternoon tea may have contributed to the smiles.
